DEFINITIONS OF THE TYPES OF DRUG FACILITY PERMITS

WHOLESALE DRUG DISTRIBUTOR (WDD)

A company engaged in the distribution of their own product. They own, house and ship their product in their name or a product licensed to them by another company. A Wholesale Drug Distributor has product manufactured under a contract or trade agreement with a manufacture or purchases product from another company to house and ship. They must be registered with the FDA. State license required in home state and all states they ship product to. If they ship control substance product, must have a DEA registration. MUST FOLLOW DSCSA REGULATIONS.

MANUFACTURER

Manufactures product for themselves or other companies under contract or trade agreement. Must be registered with the FDA. Must be registered with the DEA if they produce control substance product. License in home state required. MUST FOLLOW DSCSA REGULATIONS.

THIRD PARTY LOGISTICS (3PL)

This facility ships pharmaceutical product for other companies. Must have contract or trade agreement with each company they ship for. This facility does not take ownership of product, but does store product, control product inventory and shipping/receiving records for other pharmaceutical companies. MUST FOLLOW DSCSA REGULATIONS.

RE-PACKAGER

This facility packages product for other companies under a contract or trade agreement and does not take ownership of the product. Must be registered with the FDA. MUST FOLLOW DSCSA REGULATIONS.

VIRTUAL

A facility that is registered with the FDA, owns or licenses a product, but never receives the product into their facility. They contract to have product made by an FDA registered pharmaceutical company. They also contract to have it shipped by an FDA registered third party logistics company. They must be licensed in all states they have product shipped to and their home state. They are required to maintain an office with full-time employee(s), and keep records on their products, have SOPs and handle their product complaints and adverse events. MUST FOLLOW DSCSA REGULATIONS.
